Beside the case, he also spotted a torn museum map on the floor. “Maybe these clues belong to the person who took the necklace,” whispered Ruby. Just then, a museum guard hurried through the room talking into a radio. Later, Ethan and Ruby followed a route marked on the torn map. The trail led them to a quiet part of the museum that was closed to visitors. At the end of a hallway, they discovered a locked exhibit room. “I’ve never seen this room before,” said Ethan. Near the door, they found a second silver charm that matched the first one. Through a small window, they could see an empty jewellery stand inside the room. “Do you think the necklace was moved here?” asked Ruby. Suddenly, they heard footsteps approaching down the hallway.
